

Deep Focus from Home — 7-Day Starter Pack

by Jeffsebiz

How this week works

Each day has one job. Do the steps in your real workday, not on this page.

Anything a step asks you to write goes on the lines under that day: type into this PDF (save it after) or print it and use a pen.

Calendar steps go on whatever calendar you already use: phone, Google or paper.

Phone rule: Plan the day first. During the deep-work block, park the phone off your desk. Check messages between blocks.

Day 1: Workspace

Job: Claim one surface that is work-only.

Why: When the same table is dining, couch desk, and office, the brain never gets a clean start cue.

- Pick the exact surface you will use for the next seven workdays.
- Clear everything that is not work.
- For the first deep-work block, park the phone (another room or off the desk).
- When you finish, close the space — do not linger there.

WRITE IT HERE

MY WORK SURFACE

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Day 2: Household

Job: Set one visible do-not-disturb signal.

Why: People at home treat physical presence as availability. A signal they can see is kinder than a lecture.

- Name your core hours out loud to anyone who shares the space.
- Choose a signal a child could understand (door, headphones, card).
- Agree what counts as an emergency.
- Write one rule: chores wait for a break.

WRITE IT HERE

MY CORE HOURS

MY SIGNAL

WHAT COUNTS AS AN EMERGENCY

MY CHORES RULE

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Day 3: Digital

Job: Park the phone for the first deep-work block.

Why: Plan the day first. Then, for the block itself, the phone leaves your desk. Some research suggests a phone in view can pull at your attention, even on silent. Out of sight beats willpower.

- Write today's 1–3 outcomes, then start the block.
- Then put the phone away for 60–90 minutes (another room, or face-down off the desk).
- Need a timer? Use a kitchen timer or a clock, not the phone.
- Between blocks, pick two short windows to check messages.

WRITE IT HERE

TODAY'S 1–3 OUTCOMES

MY TWO MESSAGE-CHECK WINDOWS

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Day 4: Rituals

Job: Write a morning start and a shutdown.

Why: Rituals replace willpower. The same five minutes every day tell the brain when work begins and ends.

- Write a 5–7 minute morning sequence.
- Clear the surface. Write 1–3 outcomes. Start the first block.
- Write a 5-minute shutdown: mark what finished, capture tomorrow, leave.
- Run both for five workdays before changing them.

WRITE IT HERE

MY MORNING START (5–7 MINUTES)

MY SHUTDOWN (5 MINUTES)

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Day 5: Blocks

Job: Protect two focus blocks on the calendar.

Why: A block that is not on the calendar is a wish. Treat it as immovable.

- Choose two 60–90 minute windows for the next five workdays.
- Put them on the calendar with a start and an end.
- At the end of each, write one sentence about what you finished.
- If the day is wrecked, keep a 15-minute minimum. Do not cancel the streak.

WRITE IT HERE

BLOCK 1 START

BLOCK 1 END

BLOCK 2 START

BLOCK 2 END

Also put these on your calendar.

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Day 6: People

Job: Add one accountability loop.

Why: Home has no passive social pressure. One person who knows the plan is enough.

- Name one accountability partner.
- Send them today's 1–3 outcomes before you start.
- Set up one body-doubling or coworking appointment.
- Keep the message short. Do not wait for the perfect person.

WRITE IT HERE

MY ACCOUNTABILITY PARTNER'S NAME

MY COWORKING TIME

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Day 7: Energy

Job: Find your peak window. Plan next week there.

Why: Focus follows energy. Heroic blocks in a trough are how people quit the system.

- Look back over the last few days (your one-line notes, or memory). When did focus feel easiest?
- Name your strongest two-hour window.
- Put next week's hardest work inside it.
- Take one genuine outdoor or movement break this afternoon.

WRITE IT HERE

MY STRONGEST TWO-HOUR WINDOW

☐ I completed today's job.

ONE LINE ABOUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DID

Daily check (after Day 3): Phone parked for the block (off desk / out of reach).

Ready for more? See page 8.

What the full handbook adds

This free pack is week one: one small job a day. The Deep Focus from Home handbook by Jeffsebiz is the full system behind it, with much more detail and the forms already set up for you, as phone and desktop PDFs.

- All seven chapters in full, plus the introduction. Each goes deeper than its day here: lighting and posture, browser profiles, focus sprints, and what to do on a low-energy day.
- Daily Focus Operating System: one page for each workday, with morning setup, up to three deep-work blocks, a note to your accountability partner and a 5-minute shutdown.
- Energy & Focus Log: rate your energy and focus morning, afternoon and evening for three to five days, then name your peak window from real numbers, not memory.
- Weekly Deep Work Planner and Monthly Focus Review: plan next week's blocks on Friday, and once a month keep one or two changes and drop the rest.
- Household Focus Agreement: core hours, the do-not-disturb signal and what counts as an emergency, plus a kid version to read out loud and put on the fridge.
- Home Focus Setup Worksheet: your workspace, household rules, phone and app rules, and your morning and shutdown routines, written down once.
- Meetings and messages: how to cluster meetings so mornings stay free, and how to check email and chat at two or three set times a day.

Get the handbook, $17

Pay once. No subscription.

Or read the details first: deepfocusfromhome.com/buy